No games scheduled to-day.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. MILWAUKEE, July 19.-Watkins is beginning to feel that it is impossible for his team to win in Milwaukee this year. After losing Saturday's double header by two close scores, he lost to-day's games, the a score of 5 to 1 and the second 3 to 1. To add to the humiliation, Alonzo Hedges, a seventeen-year-old product of the Bluegrass State, was in the box for Cantillon in the second game and a decidedly scratch hit by Kellum was the of the hits secured until the last when Kellum got another and Woodruff singled. At all other times the youngster was the hero of 6,500 people in attendance at the two games, the largest crowd which has seen a ball game here

Elliott, who won the first game on Saturday, was forced to work again, and he was master of the situation in the first contest. In only one inning were hits bunched on him, and then they resulted in the Hoosiers' lone run. Both games were characterized by ever faster, more gingerly play than on Saturday. The infields were kept busy, and while some of the few errors made were giaring, the general standard Columbus ......0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 2-3 of play was excellent. Schlafley, Marcan, Unglaub and the pitchers in both games handled everything nicely and shot the ball over to first in a way that caught the

The first game started out as a pitchers' battle with the honors even until the third inning, when Newlin got his bumps. Six of the Brewers' seven hits were secured in the fourth and fifth innings and five runs resulted. At all other times he was steady Jackson, rf..5 0 1 and Milwaukee was retired in order. He was also wild in these two innings and allowed four bases on balls. Elliott pitched great ball, allowing five hits and no passes to first. It was only in the sixth, when Newlin's clean drive to center was followed by Hogriever's scorcher down the firstbase line that a run was scored. The second game developed a pitching phenom in young Hedges. Up to the eighth inning the visitors could not get the ball out of the infield, but one fly being caught by an outfielder. Until the ninth Kellum's peating out a slow one to Viox was the only hing that resembled a hit, and it looked as though Indianapolis would be blanked by a "bush" leaguer. In the ninth Kellum ot another hit, however, which, with Couler's pass to first and Woodruff's single, scored a run. Ford was wild to start with, and passed Schlafley, the first man up. Don-ahue sacrificed, and Wood sent the ball into the bleachers for a home run. Singles by Wood and Unglaub scored another in the

There were two accidents in the game, Nichols being forced to retire when hit on the arm by a pitched ball, and Unglaub badly injured his shoulder in sliding to sec-He continued in the game, however. Nichols's injury sent Coulter to first and Kellum to the field, and, as the latter got two of the hits, it was probably providen-

HOW POOLROOM PLAYERS DAILY TEMPT THE FICKLE GODDESS.

Some Play Favorites, Some Long Shots, Others Rely on "Hunches"-Fascination of Racing Game.

"Say, fellow, I've got a hot thing if you want it. It's the best ever. It's a feed-box tip, and the horse can't lose. I tell you this dog is as good as in. There's nothing to it." A lean, hatchet-faced young fellow, whose countenance had not seen soap and water for countless days, who was dressed in a dirty sweater and other weather-worn garments, sidled up to a man in the guessing contest headquarters of which the genial Mike Toomey is general manager, the other day with this blood-stirring remark. The room was full of nervous, sharp-eyed men of every class in life, all flushed with the fever of betting, all doing their best to pick a winner and to take some of Mike's money. "I'll put you next," continued the lad with the feed-box tip. "You see, my brother is a jock at Washington Park, and he puts me next to every good thing that is pulled off up there. I have a telegram in my pocket from him, and he puts me wise on Flying Ship. He's going to ride the horse, and I tell you the race is as good as done. Flying Ship will win by a city block. Go put a piece of money on-the bigger the betterand you will be on the real thing."

PLAYING A GOOD THING. Here was a good thing, thought the man who was made the confidant of the brother of the jockey who was riding at Washington Park. He scanned the card eagerly. simply comes, and there are few betters The betting on the Wheeler handicap had that are not influenced by it. just come in. Lucien Appleby was favorite 5 to 1 to 15 to 1. Flying Ship looked good. $60 in his pocket, and had pleasant anticipations of how he would spend it. Time passed slowly. The horses were slow in getting off at Chicago.

Then the red-headed telegraph operator with the megaphone voice came to life. "They're off at Washington Park," he roared. "Jack Ratlin got off in the lead, Lucien Appleby second, Flying Ship third." 'Didn't I tell you?" said the brother of the jockey, in an excited whisper. "Why, there's nothing to it. Flying Ship will go out at the quarter and will lope in. "Jack Ratlin at the half, by one length," the operator called. "Flying Ship second Bad News third, Jack Ratlin at the threequarters by two lengths, Flying Ship second, by a length; Gold Bell third. "Oh, he's coming," yelled the relative of the famous jockey. "Just wait till that Ratin dog strikes the stretch. He'll blow up like a balloon and Flying Ship will come home alone." The instrument ticked out its fateful message, with three hundred people all ears: "Jack Ratlin into the stretch by two lengths," the operator called; "Flying Ship second, by a length; Gold Bell third." The tout's mouth dropped a little. Something was wrong with Flying Ship. He revived his flagging courage and again braced the man by his side. "Wait till the winner is called," he said. "That brother of mine will take Flying Ship past that collie with a

THE TIP WENT WRONG. "And the winner," said the oracle up in the corner. There was that fateful pause, so fraught with anxiety; the borderland between boodle and broke. "Jack Ratlin wins, by a head; Gold Bell second, Flying Ship

The man who had bet the $20 looked at the brother of the jockey with wrath in his eye. The tout, crestfallen, made excuses. "Well, Flying Ship wasn't up to form, I guess," he said, sorrowfully. "He couldn't best horse; he ought to have won."

Little bits of pasteboard for which the man had exchanged two portraits of Benjamin Harrison fluttered to the floor and became lost in other little bits that had been unprofitable investments. Up in the in- | do. closure Mike Toomey, radiant, cried, "Bad News fourth." It was his way of jesting with the "pikers" that had plunged on Bad News. "Bad News fourth!" They at least got a call for their money if nothing else. The man with a sure thing is as common as flies in the poolroom. A dozen men who frequent the place eke out an existence more or less precarious by touting bettors TERRE HAUTE, July 19.-Terre Haute to horses of their selection. Either they follow the dope-the form sheets-from day to day, or else they make a guess at it, trusting to luck to help them get some money. Usually these sure things "fall down" or "blow up" in the stretch, even if they are heard from at all. An instance other day. BESSIE RAN FOURTH. A well-known man about town who made a sensational killing on a horse several sore. This is the kind of money that the weeks ago, cleaning up about $3,000, walked | bookmaker and the poolroom man hankers nto the room, quickly scanned the entries in the third Chicago race and reached in his pocket for a roll of bills. He counted out $100 and handed it to Mike. "Put that on Bessie McCarthy for me," he said calm-RHE ly. "Bessie McCarthy $500 to $100," said Mike, and the sheet-writer registered the transaction. This young man has a reputation as a successful plunger, and as soon as it was known what horse he had backed, twenty pikers fought their way to the window to get in on the good thing. Glassful was favorite, but little money went in on him. It was "Bessie McCarthy and burn up Mike." The house stood to lose about $1,000 if Bessie came home first, and naturally the message of the wire was received with intense interest. Bessie McCarthy got off good, raced into the lead at the quarter, led at the half and was going away, when something happened. Bessie either met with an accident or decided to wait until the next day before the famous definition of war given by the winning, or got peevish or something else. Anyway Haviland won the race from Glassful with another horse third. There was a sorrowful shence in the poolroom broken only by Mike's joyful joke, "Bessie Mc-Carthy fourth.' However some of the good things go through to the great joy of the lucky ones who make the most of the tip or "information" or whatever else it was that led them to bet. A few afternoons ago a lot of selling platers were running at Chicago with Boaster, a fairly good horse, favorite at 6 to 5. Just before the race was called an excited man rushed into the poolroom placed a $5 bet on Hot at 15 to 1. He got $75 for his $5 on the book. The wires were in trouble and the race was not called. After awhile the winner was announced. Hot wins, by two lengths, cried the operator. Saturday two more of these good things went through. A tip was out on Bob Franklin and on Warte Nicht at Chicago. The few that had the good things went to it strong. Both won going away at fairly good odds.

FORM PLAYING AND HUNCHES. Heaven alone knows what system is used by some bettors in playing races. Some, of Batteries-Conner and Cullen; Lundy and | course, follow form very carefully. They know just what certain horses can do at certain distances, at certain weights, on is a pretty good thing to stick to because RHE it is the basis of all betting It is the foundation on which the mathematical chances of a horse race are built. The handicapper controlled by it in making their prices. Closely adhered to, without plunging, it sometimes will win money for weeks at a time for a bettor before a losing streak develops. Accidents of mud, lack of form and such matters, are liable to make all form worthless and such frequently hap-

When the race was called Lynch romped home three lengths to the good, and the man with the hunch was $16 better off. Another man had a "hunch" on Atlas in a St. Louis twoyear-old race Saturday. He felt morally certain that Atlas would go under the wire a winner, but he lacked the courage of his convictions and did not place a bet. The price was too long, for one thing. Atlas won easily.

PATRONS OF TIPSTERS. Dozens of men that patronize the local poolroom pay from $5 to $20 weekly for daily information on the races furnished by New York or Chicago tipsters. These "firms," which really know nothing more about horse racing than a good newspaper handicapper, probably not half so much, have scores of patrons in Indianapolis and reap a pretty good harvest in fees. They send daily telegrams or letters with the names of three or four horses which they give as certain winners. "Plunge to the limit," is the usual advice. Ordinarily, they are wise enough to give horses that are made favorites in the books, so their chances of losing out with their customers are minimized. Sometimes their tips go through, more often they do not. But every day in the poolroom can be seen men who jealously guard a sheet of yellow paper on which are typewritten several names, fearful that somebody will read these magic names over their shoulders. Occasionally the information will be communicated to friends as a great favor, and one of the amusing things about the poolroom is the air of awful mystery that men will observe in discussing a telegram that some grafter in New York or Chicago has cooked up after about five seconds of deep thinking. Scores more of poolroom players follow the form sheets and tips in the daily papers. One or two Chicago papers employ expert handicappers to make daily predictions on the races. These tips are surprisingly accurate, as, for instance, one Chicago newspaper handicapper had the winners of five races out of six at Chicago picked correctly the other day. Usually two winners are given at least, and it is a bad day, indeed, when one first horse is not named. These tips are eagerly scanned in the poolroom. Anxious eyes glance from newspapers to entry card and back again, the brain puzzled to know just what to Different newspapers frequently pick entirely different horses to win the same race, and it is here that the newspaper tip follower is up a stump. He does not know how to reconcile the selections. He is in a muddle, follows his own judgment and usually goes wrong. BETTING ON FAVORITES. Some players never bet on anything save favorites, reasoning that the short price fixed by the bookmaker is the judgment of an expert and good enough for a better to follow. These prefer to play a horse at 2 to 5 or 1 to 2, betting $50 or $100 at a time, Batteries-Reed and Richardson; Bonnett of this took place in the poolroom the than to play any other way. When the upsets occur, as they often do, and a shortpriced favorite finishes in the rear of a long shot, these are the gentry that feel for. He argues that with eight or ten horses in a race anything is liable to happen, especially in a stake race where the handicapper's weights have made all about equal. Others will never play a favorite, always preferring to risk their money on a 10 to 1 or a 20 to 1 shot. This, too, is easy money for Mike and his fellows in most cases. Ten-to-one shots win and win often, but strangely enough, it is not the 10-toshot that the bet was placed on. All in all, the poolroom game is a difficult proposition-hard to beat, but harder still to keep away from. It exerts a remarkable fascination. Men who have once risked a dollar or two on a horse will, as surely as the sun rises, go back some time to risk another-if not the next day the day after, or the next week. It is not as satisfactory as betting at the race track, but it is the next best thing. It furnishes an outlet to the gambling spirit that seems to nestle somewhere in the make; up of most people. For men who can afford it it is good fun; for those who can't it corresponds closely to late W. T. Sherman. The increased interest in running-horse racing, which has swept the country from Oakland to Sheepshead Bay, is as manifest here in Indianapolis as it is at Chicago or New York. A year ago, even, the patrons of the local poolroom numbered compara-tively few. They were, for the most part, of the lower order of men-professional gamblers, touts, toadstool sports, immature clerks, rag-tag and bob-tail. Now the poolroom has been enlarged to meet the demands of the public-a public which consists not alone of Tom, Dick and Harry, but of business men and bankers, well-known men about town, a class that has a standing and has an account at the bank. Undoubtedly t is the reflection of the fever that holds the country. Whether it will continue is a matter for speculation. It is worthy of note that interest in the races has mounted steadily from year to year.
